We love classic design, especially when it's reinterpreted and embraced with a fresh attitude that brings an updated veneer to interiors that speak to the past but live for the present.

Meet the New Trad Class of '23.

NEW TRADS

Arianne Bellizaire

In the hands of Baton Rouge-based Arianne Bellizaire, glamorous and sleek furniture flirts with deep, moody palettes to achieve an urban elegance that entices. Applying an eye for edited lines, Arianne’s modernized designs lean on sculpture, highlighting classic paneling and reeded walls, as well as dazzling lighting. As a media personality and principal of a full-service design firm, Arianne Bellizaire Interiors, she finds newness in the unknown. It’s a carefully curated venture she knows and we love. ariannebellizaire.com

Meghan Blum

Meghan Blum’s interiors are flavored with all sorts of decorative looks. But her recipe for a successful kitchen—classic bones with touches of glamour—emphasizes the need for attention to what’s often labeled the heart of the home. The Des Moines-based talent enrobes her kitchens in white marble and antiqued mirrored cabinetry, adding sophisticated touches to utilitarian spaces. Her vision for luxe looks pairs well with her eye for black and white. meghanbluminteriors.com

David Frazier

From the high-rises of New York to the grand homes of the South, David Frazier embraces vintage, masculine flair. It’s easy to dote on his mellow, fresh take on traditional looks that adopt a gentle layering of antiques—a finesse that recently captured a 2023 Nashville Design Award. Deep colors, hardy materials, and natural textures meld old and new. davidfrazier.co

KELLY FINLEY

Joy Street Design is good for the soul. So it doesn’t come as a surprise that Oakland-based Kelly Finley’s natural inclination is to create spaces that evoke emotion. In addition to valuing the history of old builds, she infuses color into every project through the lens of joy. Together these elements make her polished and invigorating interiors speak to a point of view that shows personality, proclaims freshness, and greets with a decorative smile. joystreetdesign.com

YOUR VALUE IS NOT ABOUT MAKING A SPACE BEAUTIFUL. IT’S IN THE EXPERIENCE THAT YOU CAN CREATE.” —Arianne Bellizaire

Helen Bergin

Helen Bergin doesn't abandon the preppy attitude that's been the aesthetic hallmark of Palm Beach for decades. She does reinvent the style in a way that's lighter and more adaptive than the loud tones of the past. Her whimsical shots of bold color are fused with glam that arrests as much as the ocean outside. helenbergininteriors.com

Glenna Stone

Philadelphia-based Glenna Stone's designs teach the lesson of timeless-meets-transitional. Her awareness of architecture and her ability to naturally weave together texture and textiles demonstrates a skillful academic approach to design. Pops of color, albeit subtle, to enhance a neutral foundation create avant-garde living that we find both soothing and stylish. glennastone.com

Heidi Caillier

Rainy Seattle days hint at gloom, but Heidi Caillier's subdued palettes prove that gray skies inspire beauty, too. Antiques and heirlooms—with all their flaws—are sprinkled through cozy spaces that are imbued with a midcentury spin. Her new book, Memories of Home (Rizzoli), reveals her vision of classic design. heidicaillierdesign.com
